Background to the Contract:

The Assignee operates as a light entrepreneur of Omapaja based on a contract he or she has signed with Omapaja Ltd (2399894-2). The Assignee offers to the Client work tasks and services in accordance with the said contract. This assignment will be invoiced through Omapaja's invoicing service and by using its business ID. Omapaja Ltd is not a party to this Contract.

A client-assignee relationship will be established between the Parties. No employment relationship will be established between the Parties, and therefore no collective agreement will be applied to this Contract. The Assignee is a self-employed person who does not have a business ID and will agree upon the terms and conditions and prices of his or her work tasks or services directly with his or her client. The Assignee has the right to work freely for other clients also. The Assignee has the right to use assistants or stand-ins in his or her work.

Validity period of the Contract

Either Party has the right to terminate a contract that has been signed for an indefinite period subject to a one (1) month notice period.

Either Party can terminate the contract with immediate effect when:

- The other Party has materially violated this contract and fails to remedy the breach within 30 days from having received a notice from the other Party of the breach, or
- The other Party is announced bankrupt, is entered into restructuring proceedings, or becomes insolvent.

Invoicing and the term of payment

The Assignee will invoice the work tasks and services provided under this Contract through Omapaja's invoicing service.

The Client must send any reclamations concerning the invoice to the Assignee.

Omapaja Ltd will collect any overdue payments if the Assignee has authorised the company to do so. Omapaja Ltd can use the collection firm of its choice to collect the overdue payments.

Liabilities

In case of claims submitted regarding the delivery, the Assignee principally has the right to correct the erroneous or defective delivery.

The responsibility of the Parties for damage resulting from this Contract or a breach of this Contract is limited to direct damage.

The responsibility of the Assignee for damage caused to the Client in connection to this Contract is limited to the maximum remuneration agreed upon in this Contract, unless the damage is due to gross negligence or an intentional breach of this Contract.

Confidentiality

The Parties must keep permanently confidential any business and professional secrets of the other Party they have received.
